AETS, International Consultancy Company, subsidiary of the Apave Group is looking for a

Project Manager Animal health and welfare

AETS is one of the key international players in the field of institutional support in relation with trade and veterinary issues. It has been playing a major role in the implementation of EU and other donors' development cooperation programmes in this field, towards strengthening intuitional capacity in the field of animal health and welfare. AETS is one of the major operator of DG SANTE of the European Commission.

The successful candidate will be responsible for business development and consulting in the areas of animal health and welfare. She/he will develop consulting and training activities (in the fields covered by the department) with public and private clients. In addition, she/he will carry-out consulting/training missions in France and abroad.

Profile :

- At least a Degree in Veterinary Medicine or equivalent.
- At least 8 years of relevant experience in animal health/welfare issues and EU-related legislation
- Prior exposure to international environment is required
- Prior experience in writing technical and financial proposals of technical assistance/training projects financed by international donors (European Commission, World Bank, Regional and National Development Agencies) will be considered as a strong asset.
- Prior experience as trainer and/or Project Manager will be considered as a strong asset
- Prior experience in workshop facilitation will be considered as a strong asset
- Knowledge of livestock management and husbandry will be considered as a strong asset
- Proven ability for team-work in a multicultural environment and excellent writing capacities.
- Fluent in English. Knowledge of another language would be appreciated.

Location : employment based in Pau (France). Frequent missions abroad are part of the job.

Remuneration: To be discussed according to the profile

Application: CV should be sent by email to clara.blanco@aets-consultants.com